Postcards from Los Angeles: Part III

Posted Tue Jun 6, 2006, 10:35 AM ET

Onkyo, a speaker company? Don't laugh. These two monitors were among the best things I heard at the show. The neat cube-shaped monitor at the left, the D-312E, threw out a highly natural and realistic soundstage with orchestral music. Unfortunately it's available only in Japan. The D-TK10, at right, is slightly smaller, curvier, and features a cabinet made by guitar maker Takamine. It will be available for maybe $1600/pair though the price was not finalized at presstime.

Onkyo has done speakers (large and small) in the past and even today, but not like this. If these come to the U.S. I would like to hear them. If they in any way resemble there receivers and DVD players in quality, some other speaker manufacturers better be on their guard.
